Definitions and rate calculation

Formula

The rate for an advertisement and branded content is calculated based on the following formula:

$$\text{Rate} = \text{Page price} \times \text{Size factor} \times (\text{optionel: Position factor and/or Guarantee factor}) \times \text{Seasonal factor}$$

The page price (1/1 advertising page) is determined every year by a combination of various variables such as circulation, reach, selectivity, inflation and developments within the market.

Size factor

The size of an advertisement is based on the share of a 1/1 advertisement page (= page share). The impact of this advertising format is expressed in the format factor.

See page 23 onwards for an overview of all ad formats.

(Guarantee) position

By (guaranteed) position we mean the specific position or page type (editorial or advertising page) in the newspaper or magazine on which you can have your advertisement placed. For example, you can choose a front page, back page or page 3, 5 or 7. You can find these guaranteed positions in the rates.

Position factor

The price factor calculated for the guaranteed placement in the (guaranteed) position of your choice.

Reach

The reach is the number of contacts we achieve with our brands: Sources: NMO NPM-DGM 2023-I, NOM digital census (2022 Q1-Q4).

Circulation

Number of copies distributed cf. own statement (Weeklies).

Seasonal factor

An additional surcharge applies around certain holidays and/or events. These are the following days:

Combination rates

The combination rates apply only to unchanged material and to placement on the same date (daily newspapers) or in the same placement week (weeklies and newspapers). The options apply to all titles and editions belonging to a combination as stated on the 'Composition of advertising combinations' page further down in the rate card. Options per title, edition or combination may differ, depending on your choice. Consult your account manager for this.
